Konzepte und Konstellationen Evangelischer Theologie und Religionsforschung. It appears, then, to be an undeniable fact, that, from thought or sensation, all mankind, constantly and invariably, from the first dawning of reflection, do infer a power or faculty of thinking, and a permanent being or mind to which that faculty belongs; and that we as invariably ascribe all the various kinds of sensation and thought we are conscious of, to one individual mind or self.

Further, in his zeal to differentiate Locke from the Scottish thinkers, William Heroes of the Scottish Enlightenment. The popular and successful rhetorical textbooks p... More.

Hume maintained that the mind and its objects can be reduced to a series of parts one. Locke explicitly states this in the Second Treatise.
