Southeast Asian Studies 41 2 : – Start Date : November Est. Integrated water management involves coordination across multiple programs. Availability of cultivable land is further limited by the slope, climate and low regeneration rates of the high altitudes. He also has a strong interest in reduction of stormwater run-off, especially in urban areas, through the use of infiltration practices such as rain gardens and bio-retention basins. The latter, mostly based on case studies, has provided detailed understanding. It does recognise grassroots communities as institutional partners, after acknowledgement of failure and renunciation of direct intervention in favour of the participatory model.
