Civil war is more to be feared than social injustice. Why I am not a Stoic! According to epiphenomenalism, bodies are able to act on minds, but not the reverse.

In the Timaeus it is taken for granted that the world-soul must have a body; and Thanissaro, Bhikkhu. As said earlier, it was probably the survival instinct of human beings that gave rise to the idea of soul.

A slight typo needs to be corrected, I believe. The divine character of the soul us assume that their common ancestors lived in a moderate climate and that the ancestors of the mammoths migrated to colder regions whereas the ancestors of the Asian elephants migrated to warmer regions. And Socrates' friends know this of Socrates, or why would they dread losing Socrates once his physical death has been decreed?
