Chapter 1. China is increasingly investing in many of these same Latin American sectors. Need help?

Such an approach stands in stark contrast to Latin America. Regaining control? Rogerio Studart Non-resident senior fellow Verified email at thegfcc. The dragon in the room that few are talking about is the fact that China is simultaneously out-competing Latin American manufacturers in world markets- so much so that it may threaten the ability of the region to generate long-term economic growth.
