The distinction between an expatriate and a local is important for purposes of benefits and taxation. Some companies are more aggressive and others more conservative on the interpretation of tax law in the host location. He now lives in Switzerland, where he writes on private international law issues, especially in the fields of nationality and tax.

Many Americans living abroad are unaware of or confused about their US tax filing. You know you need to file taxes in both countries, but this legal obligation can seem overwhelming. Conceptually, extradition might be sought for perjury. Some cases are beyond compromise: the Bussell cases see below involved hidden assets, you can do the same .
