MOTHER DAUGHTER SPEAK

Many of us in this room are the daughters of mothers; and, among those, many are us to think about the mother-daughter bond over time and across different cultures. . knowledge of how ambivalent and complicated our relationships really are. . These connections across time and place make for rich "inter-textualities".

I am also super wary at this point 49 years old about romantic relationships, as I have made so many decisions in the past that undermined my own value, needs, and desires...and I think that is because I just did not grow up valuing myself! I regret it and ache from it .

When we just can never get on the same page. Thank you for sharing other mother-
By Nicolo Carlos Rosales. In a way, we are the living memories of our parents and all they wanted for us. Its isolating for me to constantly read about mothers and daughters who seem to have such a tight and magical connection.

I am the ear that listens, the voice of reason at times, arms that snuggle anytime of day or night, and heart that will bleed when they hurt while having enough mind to know that growing up will have its bumps and bruises along the way. There were times I felt I had to be the mother, to drive her home after a few too many pineapple flirtinis at the Breakers bar, help her stumble into bed and try to feed her water, ibuprofen, a banana before she fell asleep.
